These men are shown working for the Lett Camp in the Bundy Hills area. Dick Street is holding the horses and George Norman is to his left, slightly in front of him.

This picture was taken at Hall's Camp in the Bundy Hills. Group pictures of logging crews like this are relatively common, always causing one to pause to wonder what occasion prompted some fifty-five men to stop working to have their picture taken.
