James E. Johnson inducted into honor society

BIG RAPIDS – Ferris State University graduate student James E. Johnson of Detroit was recently inducted into the National Scholars Honor Society.

NSHS is an academic honors organization dedicated to encouraging, recognizing and rewarding high academic achievement in all areas of study.

Johnson is currently enrolled in Ferris' master's degree program in Education with an emphasis in Curriculum and Instruction. He earned a bachelor's degree in Applied Speech Communication from Ferris in 1999. In addition to attending his graduate classes, Johnson works in the Office of University Advancement and Marketing and will be joining Ferris' Charter Schools office this fall.

A graduate of Berkley High School, Tyndall Center, in Southfield, Johnson is the son of Debra Johnson of Detroit and grandson of the late Willie Lee Marable.
