STATEMENT OF AIMS:

Looking to the future, we all face what looks like hard economic times for health science librarians. Yet there are still ways in which we as members of MHSLA can work to help ourselves and our colleagues cope with what's ahead and maintain a "can do" attitude. I feel that we must -

Continue to work toward the long range goals set in motion by recent administrations and to uphold the ethical standards they have set.

Look to the future not only as a challenge but as opportunity.

Revitalize and energize our membership with enthusiasm and optimism for our profession.

Continue to lend our experience and innovation to our colleagues through communication and support mechanisms.

Continue to strengthen our ties to GMR and the State Council and actively communicate with our local groups.

A colleague of mine once said "now is an exciting time to be a librarian...with all the automation taking place." Looking back on 25 years of association with health science libraries, I can safely say that it has always been exciting to be a librarian. There has always been and will always be opportunity for challenging and exciting experiences.

As President of MHSLA, I will strive to lead by a positive example; to lend my experience, innovation, enthusiasm and optimism; to seek advice from and listen to our membership, and to continue to support my colleagues and members of MHSLA through active participation and leadership.

STATEMENT OF AIMS

As President-Elect, I would work to help the organization to fulfill its mission to meet the educational needs of its members, to administer the resources for biomedical libraries which are cooperatively created and maintained, and to act as an advocate for professional library services and standards. In the area of education I would try to find innovative opportunities for the long-time professional and also provide opportunities for the para-professional and support staff in the biomedical libraries in our state.

In the areas of cooperative resources I would seek to continue our involvement with DOCLINE and the GMR-GAC and encourage new cooperative ventures such as grants and new networking methods.

As an advocate for health science libraries I would seek to continue a dialog among not only ourselves, but with health administration organizations, NLM, physicians' groups and multi-type library organizations to stress the importance of local libraries and librarians in the grand scheme of things.

STATEMENT OF AIMS

MHSLA is an important vehicle for recharging the member librarians with the annual Education Conference playing a major role in the activities of the association. As President-Elect I would hope to continue the excellent tradition of planning and delivering quality educational and professional experience for our membership.

Many of us work in one-person or "downsized" situations. This Association should be aggressively planning for the survival of our membership, providing that spark that will get us through another crisis and broadening our talents. I would hope to provide guidance that will allow the Association to be balanced between the very practical needs of a working membership and the intellectual challenges of our profession.
